✳ Word of the Head of the Obstetrics and Gynecological Nursing Department

It is my pleasure to welcome you to the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecological Nursing, one of the fundamental departments of the Faculty of Nursing, which aims to prepare distinguished nursing graduates who possess the scientific competence and clinical skills necessary to provide safe and comprehensive nursing care for women and newborns throughout different stages of health care.

The department is committed to applying the latest teaching and training strategies in accordance with quality assurance and academic accreditation standards through providing a modern educational environment that supports active learning, enhances students' practical skills and critical thinking, and integrates digital transformation and modern educational technologies into the teaching process.

The department also strives to prepare highly qualified graduates who are capable of keeping pace with the latest developments in obstetrics and gynecological nursing, competing efficiently in the labor market, and adhering to professional values and ethics.
